WAGES AND TARIFF.

Workingmen Will Now Get What They Voted for Last Fall.

LEVELING UP AND LEVELING DOWN.

of High Wages the American Workman Has Decided to Go Back to Where He Started From-Instead of Compelling the European to "Level Up"to His Standard, He Will "Level Down" to the European Standard. Strong Words from a Labor Organ.

In the national election of 1892 the workingmen of the United States decided that they did not want protectiod. Of course there is a diversity of opinion among them on this, as there is on almost every question, but a majority of them voted the Democratic ticket, and their ballot carried with it all that the Democratic platform expressed or implied. In arriving at that conclusion it must be assumed that they acted intelligently. It would be doing them an injustice to say that they were merely attracted by abstract theories to ignore concrete conditions.
As it is pertinently said, "If the workingmen want free trade, why free trade is what the workingmen want," and they ought to have it regardless of results.

For some time prior to 1860 the sults.

For some time prior to 1860 the workingmen of the United States enjoyed all the beneficent results of the principles which, by their votes of last year, they decided were the correct principles of government. Able-bodied journeymen machinists by working twelve hours could earn as much as minety cents a day, and flour in 1858 sold as low as ten dollars a barrel. The expenses for conducting the government on an economical basis were produced by a tariff laid on ten, coffee and ment on an economical basis were produced by a tariff laid on tea, coffee and sugar. In consequence the cost of those commodities to the consumer was so great that it amounted to almost practical prohibition for the ordinary workman. A substitute decoction made of burntrye and sweetened with New Orleans molasses was used. Nearly all articles made of iron, steel, or glass were imported from England, where it was produced at a minimum cost, the wages of workingmen there being much less than in the United States. In those days a workman with a rag carpet on days a workman with a rag carpet on his floor was regarded by his fellow workman as an aristocrat to be envied, workman as an aristocrat to be envied, and a man with a piano or organ in his house was a millionaire. This, according to the dictrim of our free trade friends, was an ideal civilization and of course we ought to put no impediment in the way of returning to it.

The protective tariff adopted shortly after the period referred to tended to the development of home industries. The wages of our industrial population began to increase gradually. In time it became a matter of comment if the home of a workingman was found without a carpet on at least one floor in the home of a workingman was found without a carpet on at least one floor in the house, or an organ or piano in the parlor. Coffee and ten sweetened with granulated or loaf sugar became as common as beer drinking is to-day in our large industrial centers. It was discovered, too, that as our industries developed the wages of the workingmen were increased, invention was stimulated, the cost of production was reduced to a minimum and articles before recarded as luxurious became so cheap regarded as luxurious became so cheap that every one became habituated to them, so that to-day he who should hesitate to pronounce them as articles necessary to our well-being would be regarded as a lunatic. Another thing was discovered as a direct result of this system. The wages and standard of living of the English workingman increased almost in the same ratio as that reased almost in the same ratio as that of his American brother. The United States began a competition for the markets of the world. The English artizan was compelled by the force of his tradeunion, his master, to level "up" his wages to a par with that of the American artizan. This leveling-up process can artizan. This leveling-up process was gradual but it was sure.

After an experience of a generation the American workman has decided that it would be as well to go back to where we started from. That instead of compelling the European workman to "level up" to his standard it is better that he should level "down" to the standard of the European workman. In this lies the whole gist of the tariff discussion. For there is no question in this lies the whole gist of the tariff discussion. For there is no question in the mind of any intelligent person that whether it is up or down, that when this leveling process is completed that free trade will be a consummation devoutly to be wished. It will be an ideal condition for the distribution of the products of industry.

Perfection has no abiding place among men, therefore it is not strange that the protective tariff policy n vogue in the United States for the past thirty years should have many imperfections. It has been the result of much study, much honesty, a considerable sprinkling of

has been the result of much study, much honesty, a considerable sprinkling of knavery, some selfishness, and at least a little bit of ignorance. Legislative bodies are not always immaculate. Witness the present legislature at Springfield, a more corrupt, venal, victors or ignorant set of rascals probably some searchled under the name of a nover assembled under the name of a legislature, and yet it is the best that the combined wisdom of the voters of Illinois could produce, or at least that they cared to produce. The Congress of the United States is a typical embodiment of the Illinois legislature, of the United States is a typical embodiment of the Illinois legislature, only allittle farther removed from responsibility to the people. Therefore when congress assembles to produce a tariff bill it must necessarily be the result of many compromises, not only of the interests of the people, but of honor and integrity as well. The representative of the caster oil trust happens also to be a representative of the people, and must protect the client that pays him, best or that he can fool the least, and so caster oil, which should have no place in the procession, must be awarded a prominent place on the list. The representative of the quining interest occupies a similar position, and so it goes with all the various interests, but after all, when the bill is completed it. goes with all the various interests, but after all, when the bill is completed it is a fair embodiment of the will, if not of the wishes, of the people, and with all their weaknesses the various tariff bills have been of immessurable value to our people. This must be and is frankly admitted by even our most violent opponents of the protective tariff, but they say the time has come when the infant can walk alone.

Having arrived at this conclusion the

Having arrived at this conclusion the workingmen, who are mainly responsible for it, must accept its results frankly and fearlessly. They must not appear in the whining attitude of the man who did not know it was loaded. Some of these results are now upon us. In this leveling "down" process the workmen must be prepared to face demands for a lowering of wages. It will come whether he is prepared for it or not. In the light of events already transpired the manufacturer is preparing to meet a reduced tariff; when his standing orders are filled he will close his factory. He would be a fool to do otherwise. Filling up a stock for future consumption means absolute vain to him if the tariff is reduced on his production. A reduction of the tariff means one of three inevitable conditions. Either wages must be leveled "down" to meet those of competitive nations, the manufacturer must close up, or he must "bust" up.

DRY ITCHING SCALES THAT CRACKED AND POPPED OPEN.

LINDLEY, STEUBEN Co., N. Y., April 11, 1890. FOSTER, MILBURN & Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

FOSTER, MILBURN & Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Gentlemen:—When about ten or twelve years old I was toubled with cracks across the palm of my left hand, and when they healed the trouble broke out on my head, and every winter it would come out as a sort of tetter and make scales all over my head. I have not been free from it a single winter since, but it was worse last winter after I had the grippe, for then it came out in spots all over my body. I had a doctor examine me, and he told me that there was no cure for me. I got worse and worse, and pop open, showing a watery matter. My skin was all like a dry wrapper. It felt as though it had dried on me. The scales were so bad that they would collect in the bed and have to be shaken out. It was about this time that I commenced using B. B. B. It was so bad that I was ashamed to take my hat off before a neighbor. I had used five bottles of another medicine without noticing any effect; but when I commenced to take B. B. the sores came out thicker than before, and they burned like fire; they were immense blotches of fire that would burn so I could not sleep. The way they burned and itched can not be told, and I hope no one else msy ever know from experience. The only relief I could get was from washing the sores with some B. B. B.

I stuck to the medit-ne and was on the fourth bottle before I could see that I was states to get and the could not sleep. The way they burned and the could see that I was states to the medit-ne and was on the fourth bottle before I could see that I

I stuck to the medicine and was on the fourth bottle before I could see that I was really better, although I knew that it was better to get such rottenness out of my blood than to have it stay there. I did say once that I wished I had never commenced taking B. B. B., but my wife encouraged me, and to-day I thank her for the advice, for I am in good health now, and I don't believe I ever would have been with my blood in such a condition as it was.

My scalp now is clean and clear of all scales and tetter, and on my body there are only small spots to show where the scree were, and these spots are free from scales. I do not doubt but that the cure will be perfect. I am now on the sixth bottle and will take more until every spot is gone. I firmly believe that Burdock Blood Bitters will cure the worst disorders of the blood, for such certainly was mine.
